C. Concept and Purpose:

The speakers were communicated with and were provided with the concept note which clearly defined the purpose of the webinar and only after their consent on speaking on topics relating to the same they were mailed the official invitation letter from the email-id created for the purpose. The concept note of the webinar is as follows:

Confined within the safety of the four walls called 'home', on account of the pandemic, there arises a need and a demand for a rethinking of the gender binaries. 'Home' as the signifier of the 'private sphere' comes with a special emphasis on the domestic as duties and work. From an ideological vantage point the 'private' and the 'domestic' have been read with a gendered colouring, and so the webinar intends to explore the gender dynamics and related shifts probable post Covid-19, as well as those prevalent during the quarantined phase that we are passing through and in the process 'unmask' gender.

'Unmasking' when it comes to gender has its own dynamics. It's a process with layers to it and gender as a category defining identity makes its presence felt in multifarious spaces and premises. So we will hear our esteemed speakers, from both East and West, speak their minds to pinpoint and hence problematize and unleash diverse narratives of our gendered existence.

D. Technical aspect of the Webinar:

No external support was taken for the technical needs of the seminar. The brochure was prepared by a Paban Das, 3rd Year student of the Department of English, Ananda Chandra College, and the certificates and feedback link were prepared by the Convenor of the event Mr. Dibyabibha Roy. The inauguration flute play by Arnab Bhattacharjee was recorded and uploaded with his consent to the collaborative webinar's YouTube channel AC MWC, so as to avoid interruption due to network issues. The generation of Google form for registration and linking of the same to the Webinar's WhatsApp Group was done by our colleague Ms. Alivia Sarker, from the Department of Physics. She also took care of the technical aspects while the webinar was going on, so as to ensure smooth and ordered running of the event.

F. Summary of the speaker's discussions:

Ms. Romy Martinez, prominently highlighted how the women from Paraguay had broken the gender stereotypes to carve a niche of their own. She presented the musical roles adopted by women in Paraguay, including instrumentalists, singers, composers and/or teachers, along with other areas such as cultural management and communications. The biographies of women, born in Paraguay between the 60s, 70s and 80s and who developed their musical careers inside or outside the country, were based on testimonies from her structured interviews. Among the issues explored, include the difficulties of combining a musical career with marriage and children, and the impact of military regimes on developing a musical career. Attention was also turned to the stereotypes that these women learned to undo within a society that placed woman's beauty before talent, or which expected their musical training to be confined to specifically "feminine" musical genres.

Dr. Pradipta Shyam Chowdhury spoke about the need of third world female agency against the western feminist discourses and also of the effectivity of a collective awareness of rights in the fight against patriarchy. His talk problematized homogeneity of 'women' as a category.

Dr. Goutam Karmakar's discussed gendered spaces as denoting the areas where particular genders and particular types of gender expressions are welcomed, and from this point as beginning went on to show, how COVID 19 tends to reshape, alter and negotiate with the concepts based on 'known' or regularly exercised ideas and in this way, redefine the understandings of identity and show how spaces are shaped by the people who inhabit that space and give meaning to it. His talk attempted to decode how women are continuously negotiating with their male partners for the need of their family during this COVID 19 and they are also performing the duties of male members to cope up with this pandemic.

G. Unmasking of Gender by the interactions in the Webinar:

Our first speaker, Ms. Romy Martinez statistically brought out the victory of female musicians as through her presentation, she revealed how the voices of women have emerged neglecting social, political and cultural barriers. She exposed the plurality of voices and paths for women musicians who play influential roles within Paraguayan society and in the end showed how Music indeed can sail us through these fragile times.

Our second speaker, Dr. Pradipta Shyam Chowdhury from the vantage point of Third World Feminists', opened the space not only for questioning 'women' as a homogenized category, but also exposed the socio-cultural dynamics at play which constructs as well as creates differences within the category.

Our third speaker, Dr. Goutam Karmakar, moved us through the fluidity of gender, beginning from Butler's concept of 'performativity', leading us through an understanding of gender as a spectrum into the pandemic perspective of gender both analytically and statistically, which calls for gender sensitization.

The webinar opened a conversational space not only between speakers and audiences, between East and West, between aesthetics and disease/pandemic around the topic 'gender', but had also opened a dialectical space, in context of gender, between fact and fiction, between the female artist as a musician and her life, between transgression and oppression, talent and male gaze, white women's feminism and the indigenusness of Third World Feminism, questioning 'signification' based on gender. The webinar had through talks and interactions opened dispersive, rhizomatic spaces, revealing new perspectives to think upon.
